

HARBOR SEALS

Help seals and their pups by leaving them be...

Harbor seal pups and human interference:

- Harbor seals are less mobile on land and therefore more vulnerable to disturbance or predation while out of the water.
- Adult seals are more wary and escape to the water more quickly than pups.
- Females will flee to the water if disturbed or approached and may leave their pups behind.
- A female is more likely to return to reclaim her pup once the disturbance near the pup goes away.
- Data suggest pups have successfully reunited with their mothers up to 48 hours after separation.
- If activity continues near the pup, the female may eventually give up trying to return and the pup will be abandoned. A nursing pup that is separated from its mother will NOT survive.

Harbor seal pups look very cute, but remember they are wild animals and need to remain with their mothers. Please leave pups where they are, do not touch or relocate a pup. If you are concerned for the welfare of the pup, take the following steps:

What to do when encountering a seal on a beach:

- Stay at least 150 feet away from it. Pup's mothers may be just around the corner.
- Don't handle it, and keep other people and dogs away.
- Call a local marine mammal stranding network member.

Visit NOAA's Greater Atlantic Regional website for contact information (http://www.nero.noaa.gov/prot_res/stranding). Or call NOAA Fisheries Service's stranding hotline at 1-866-755-NOAA (6622).

Report Harassment

Seals are federally protected from harassment and capture by the public. If you observe incidents of people or pets tormenting, disturbing or attempting to remove a seal from the beach contact the NOAA Office of Law Enforcement to report a violation:

800-853-1864

Photo credits: Upper right: University of New England; Bottom left: Maine Department of Marine Resources